The Palm Pre has been out for nearly two weeks, and seems to be doing pretty well. But some numbers have surfaced that cast a shadow over the device's success: Pre users just aren't downloading many apps, despite the fact that there seems to be many developers ready to build apps for the phone. The data comes from Medialets, a mobile analytics firm that has been sniffing around in the App Catalog, and has decided that only about 660,000 downloads have occurred. Assuming some 200,000 Pres have sold in the first weekend-that's an average of 3 apps per user. And that kind of spells trouble for Palm, since app sales are going to be vital to push the sales of the Pre itself. A mere three apps per user either suggests the user's aren't into downloading apps, which is unlikely, or there's some other blockage going on. The store does have just 30-odd apps available, which will play into the sales statistics, and they simply may not be very desirable for the average Pre user. Comparison with the iPhone situation is unavoidable, since it's that smartphone and its iTunes App Store ecosystem that first demonstrated how successful a business cellphone apps could really be. The App Store surfaced a year after the iPhone itself, so there was a lot of momentum built up for app downloads through the sheer millions of iPhones that had been sold. Nevertheless, there were around 500 apps available on launch day, and they've been growing in numbers ever since, and being downloaded in increasing numbers too. Apple 's capitalizing on the success of the App Store and has used it often in its publicity to drive the sales of the iPhone itself-the more powerful 3G S will likely enhance matters since it'll be more capable of playing games. Of course the Pre is new, it's not selling in as large numbers as the device, meaning there was no sales momentum built up to drive app downloads. So the picture isn't as bleak as comparisons with the iPhone might suggest. Nevertheless it is worrying for the long-term future of the device, since Palm's strategy of keeping the app development SDK close to its chest may not have been the smartest move. If Palm had pushed the SDK out to more development SDK close to its chest may not have been the smartest move. sold. That would unquestionably boosted the buzz about the Pre. Instead we're left to wonder if the positive buzz about the phone may just die out, because it's definitely not getting much of a push from its applications sales. That's a situation that may get worse, as Palm isn't due to release the SDK until late summer. [via Electronista] Managing your PC's downloads folder is a lot like dealing with e-mail: if you don't have a good strategy to stay organized, it can get really cluttered, really quickly. Even still, many of us treat the downloads folder as a dumping ground. It's a place we pay little attention to except for those odd times that we have to dive in to find a specific file or free up space on our hard drive. Otherwise, it's usually out of sight and out of mind. Don't let the digital equivalent of shoveling everything in the closet muck up your PC. These two quick tips can make it easier to keep your files under control and find the files you're looking for quickly. Send it to the desktop One of the easiest ways to manage your downloads is to have your browsers download files to your desktop by default. Since you're always looking at your desktop, you're more likely to keep it clean by deleting files you no longer need. Then, when you download something new, finding it on the desktop is much easier, because it's one of the few files sitting on your desktop. Here's how to adjust your browser's settings to send downloads to the desktop. Chrome's Downloads setting. Chrome: Click the "hamburger" menu icon in the upper-right corner and go to Settings... > Downloads. Click the Change... button, select your desktop in the window that pops up, and click OK. Firefox's Options window. Firefox: Click the "hamburger" menu icon in the upper-right corner and select Options. In the new window that opens, open the General tab and then click the Browse... button under the Downloads heading. Next, choose your Desktop in the File Explorer window that opens and click Select Folder. Internet Explorer window that opens and click the Browse... button under the Downloads heading. choose View downloads. In the next window that opens, clickOptions in the lower right-hand corner. Another window will open; click the Browse... button and then choose your desktop as a download dumping ground, or for those odd times your browser preferences are ignored, a quick setting in File Explorer can really help you find a recent downloads folder in the left-hand navigation column. In Windows 8.1, you should see four columns in the main window: Name, Date modified, Type, and Size. By default, File Explorer organizes your downloads folder by name. That's a great default setting for most folders, but with Downloads—where you may not even know the name of the file you're looking for—it's not ideal. Instead, click the "Date modified" column until you see a downward facing arrow above the column title. That will automatically put your most recent downloaded files at the top of the folder, making them much easier to find. File Explorer will remember your choice and every time you open your downloaded files at the top of the folder, making them much easier to find. File Explorer will remember your choice and every time you open you ope doesn't actually host any torrent files (like Torrentz), most of the time you still have to go to other third-party sites for the download. Not so with Magnetiser. When you see are links to external sites hosting the torrent file. Most of the time that means you'll need to click through to other sites to hunt for the download link to the torrent you're looking for. However, BitTorrent clients like uTorrent support magnet links, which, for the purpose of BitTorrent search engine that doesn't host torrent files) or isoHunt. If it detects that you're on a torrent's detail page, you'll see "Magnetise" in the Firefox status bar. Click on Magnetise to open the torrent in your default BitTorrent client. If you're not sure when this could come in useful, all-things-BitTorrent weblog TorrentFreak makes a good case: "Not only does it save time, it also comes in handy when a torrent is no longer available on the external site." It's also useful for people with ISPs or IT people who block .torrent file downloads.Magnetise hasn't yet been approved at Mozilla's Add-on site, but you can download the magnetiser.zip, change the file extension from ZIP to XPI, then drag and drop the XPI into Firefox. (A bit of a hassle, we know. When it is approved, it should be available with a click-to-install here.)
